

Islanders woke up this morning to 3-4 inches of heavy, wet snow blanketing the village. Ocracoke hadn't had a real snowfall for over a decade. Even though virtually nothing is open and hardly anyone had anywhere to go, the roads and lanes were busy early this morning as neighbors walked, rode and drove through the village admiring the winter scene and snapping pictures.

Sundae Horn & Rob Temple's House

Ocracoke Lighthouse

Island Inn

The Road to the Harbor

Winter Beach